“We believe ExpensiConX is going to be one of the best React Native conferences in the world,” says Daniel Vidal, Chief Strategy Officer at Expensify. “On top of the tens of millions of members and the thousands of partners we have, we’re also building an incredible community around the world’s top React Native engineers. We’ve successfully done this with accountants, hosting ExpensiCon, to shape the future of accounting. Now we’re having top engineers from all around the world join us in Curaçao to help build the future of financial apps.”

With attendees from 6 continents, including participants from Margelo and Software Mansion, Expensify is looking forward to hosting a diverse group of developers at ExpensiConX. Attendees will participate in workshops and discussions on advanced React Native topics, including the latest trends in app development, best practices for app performance, and more.

During an action-packed week, attendees will also meet the Expensify team, leadership, guides, and account managers. In addition to workshops, the event includes thought-provoking keynotes, role-specific training sessions, large group collaboration sessions, 1:1 mentor/mentee sessions, and social events to strengthen the community.

“In 2022 alone, we collectively paid over $1.2M to our 125 open source contributors and we’re just getting started,” says Andrew Gable, a Director at Expensify. “We're committed to bringing the world's top React Native engineering talent together to build the next version of Expensify, all while building via Open Source. We're confident that the attendees at ExpensiConX will bring new ideas and perspectives to the table that will help us push the boundaries of what's possible with React Native."
